

Hello Lovely Yellow Class

It was so lovely to talk to some of you and your families. I was happy to hear your voices but also a bit sad because I miss you all. It was great to find out that you have been doing some learning at home. I have been enjoying an audio book this week (listening to a story being read to me).

I went to Tottenham for a walk along the canal. I had a lovely daydream about living on a boat by the river.

I had to drive to New Cross, it was interesting to see all the different shaped buildings.

Lots of Love

Hi there, Yellow Class children and families!

Well the time does seem to be going very fast, although I'm not particularly doing anything new. It was so lovely to talk to many of you last week, it made me miss you even more! It was great to hear about your Lego models and all the different construction toys you are using to make different types of models. I love the way some of you are reading and really, really enjoying it. I also love how some of you thoroughly enjoyed it when I read Eat your Peas; many of you then drew loads and loads of peas. I think the largest number of peas was 75!

This week I have recorded the story of When the Tiger Came to Tea. I thought if you fancy doing some drawing, you could draw the tiger. You could also draw some of the food you think the tiger might eat if you had a visit at your house from the tiger! Keep the picture safe and when we are next together please show it to me.

I had a lovely socially-distanced walk on the weekend with my daughter, Gemma. She lives in a flat in Muswell Hill, so I don't see her every day. We walked through Ally Pally where the views were amazing because it was such a clear, sunny day.

My son, Joe, who still lives at home is in the middle of online university exams. He has been very busy studying so hasn't really had much time to tidy his room! I hope you are all keeping well, happy and calm. Make sure you continue to eat healthy food and exercise regularly.

Lots of love, Marisa xx
