

Lovely Yellow Class!

Hello lovely people I'm REALLY missing everyone now!

The best part of my day is still going out for a walk. Did you all see the rainbows last week?

Wow!

It took me ages to make this for you because Holly kept running off with the sticks!

When I was a child, I was a bit of a day dreamer. Having children and becoming a teacher I forgot how much I love it. I have become really good at daydreaming again. Do you know how? Just sitting quietly by yourself making up stories or make-believe conversations in your head. You can take imagination anywhere.

I'm really enjoying having time to daydream, even if it's just for a few minutes in the day while I'm out on my walk.

In the first few weeks of lock down my family were really enthusiastic about playing games and cooking together. We are finding it harder to motivate ourselves now, one thing that helps is singing and dancing around the living room. We try not to disturb the neighbours, but it always lifts our spirits. One of our favorite's is 'Ain't Got No - I Got Life' Nina Simone, do you have music that cheers you up? If you get a chance this week have a dance with your grown-ups.

Lots of love

Hi Yellow class,

Hope you are all keeping well.

This week I have recorded a story for you to listen to, it's Eat Your Peas. It lasts for about 5 minutes. So a good plan would be for you to read to your grown up for 5 minutes (or 3 or 4 minutes if that's better for you), then listen to the story. Next, see how many peas you can draw in 5 minutes, then count them out loud to your grown up. You need to make sure it's a really big number!

This week I have also been doing some gardening (I don't do this very often). I have taken a photograph of the amazing pink rhododendrons in my garden! They look especially beautiful this year. I have also taken a photo of some plants my friend gave me, hopefully they will grow into big gorgeous tomato plants. I will then bring the tomatoes to school to share with you all. I am remembering how some of you loved tomatoes and some of you hated them! Pity I can't grow a sweetie tree then everyone would love them!

Take good care of yourselves and your families.

Love Marisa x
